It is remarkable with what avidity native correspondents discuss the subject of religion in the columns of the Nieshin Shinjishi. Indeed. the controversies seem sometimes to excite an interest much beyond the value of the arguments advanced, and far greater than the " missionary " correspondence that a Yokohama contemporary has favoured its readers totally changed, and 'people are exalting riots in his territory. Natural Philosophy as taught in Europe | There is a rumour current in the community, again, "Natural Philosophy is sufficient to expelieve that Buddhism is great nonsense, and only calls for their contempt. Now it is a great pity that they are so ignorant of the true nature of Buddhism, which is a obcerful and happy faith; and that they speak evil of so mild and beneficent a religion. SINGAPORE. (Straits Times, September 20th) The principal, event of political interest during the past fortnight has been the Public On LONDON .-Meeting in the Town Hall last Monday, to support the protest of the Unofficial Members of Council against the abolition of the Grand Jury, and to express the opinion of the public regarding the Obinese Immigrants Bill. There was a good deal said in favour of continuing the Grand Jury, and though we have all along advocated its abolition, it cannot be denied that there is great force in the suggestion of the ON SHANGHAL .-Judge of Pennng, Sir William Mackett, that at the same time none, but trained Magistratos should be appointed, owing to the increased reeponeibility that will be thrown upon them under the new law. This would appear to be most urgently required here, judging from the assertions of Mr. R. C. Woods, and Mr. J. D. Vaugham in their speeches at the meeting, that pressure is put upon the Magistrates by the Executive to send cases up for trial, and that, as bus been proved by more than one instance, the Magistrates are too prone to consider themselves as Government servants. and not as servants of the people. The other subject considered by the meeting is one of very considerable importance to the community at large, affecting as it undoubtedly will the supply of labour to carry on the various industries of the Colony. The subject was also debated at great length in the Legislative Council, on the 9th instant, and the shorthand report wing shing to travelling trader. will be read with much interest. We presume there is no doubt that Her Majesty's Navy will now take matter into their own bands; and vindicate the honor of the British flag. The probable result will be that the Laroot disturbances will be spendily put an end to, and peace and order restored, and trade revived in that torritory. As will be seen by the shorthand reports of Council, little was accomplished during the visit of H.E. the Governor in H. M.S. Thalia, but before his return from Poname he convened a meeting of the Executive , with of late. THE BALLAD OF OWENDOLINE MAY. She leant g'or the side as he rowed from the shore And the ochoes awoke at the plash of the our: Was never a young heart so blithesome and gay. As bent in the breast of fair Gwendeline May. The stars were all out and the night breeze was cool The lilies gloamed white as they dipped in the pool She locked at her face mirrored clear in the bay. And smiled at its beauty, did Gwondoline May. The dark leaves she twined in her clustering hair,

"No jewels save these will I wear on that day When I stand as a bride," laughed sweet Gwendoline May. " No flowers in the fairest of gardons, I see, ... Have half of the beauty these buds have to me, They rise and they full with the sweet waters play

Their golden caps dew-gemmed," said Gwendolin "And should it so hap -- God forbid it;" she crice That in my sweet maidenhood's promise I died, Then a cross of those lilies, dear heart, you will lay-On the hands mutely folded of Gwendoling May, 'Nay, grieve not thy lover with fancies so wild," He said, as he guzed on her beauty and smiled : "Thou art young, and as fair and asstrong as the day And I love thee so dearly, sweet Gwondoline May. "But lovers have parted ere this day," she sighed " And maiden been plighted who never was bride. But come life or come death I'll be constant for av As I am to my littes," said Gwendoline May. . "Such functes arise when I stand here at night, And they shimmer and shine in the misty moonlight

All folded and calm like a child tired of play, My lilies float sleeping," said Gwendoline May. "And I think that the spirits of those who were ong ago in the lake, and who never were found,

Rise again in a beauty that nought can decay. And live in my lilies," said Gwendeline May. "Row me o'er to that nook which looks darksome and far. Where one glorious bud shineth out like a star, I will plack it so fast, not a moment we'll stay,

For the night falloth quickly," sighed Gwendoline

She reached her fair fingers and caught at the flower-O. fatal white fily-O, treacherous hour !-Ere her lover could rise, in the dark pool she lay, And the lilies closed membling o'er Gwendoline May He carried her far through the misty mocalight, While the blossome hing drooping from fingereas white. DARTMOOR CASTLE. The "Castle of Dartmoor" now consists of a single square-tower, of very late character; which, rising on its mound above the old church of Lidford, overlooks a wide extent of "woodland and of waste." It can never have been much more than a huntinglodge for the princes and other "great worthie personages," who, as Manwood tells us, were alone capable of holding a " forest, or of chasing the wild deer within it. But it long rejoiced in an evil reputation as containing the prison of the stannary court (probably the existing tower), which is mentioned as "one of the most beinous, contagious, and detestable places in the whole realm." It is thus described by William Browne, of Tavistock, whose "Britannia's Pastorals" attained so great a reputation in the days of Spenser and of Sidney :-

"They have a custle on a hill, I took it for an old windmill. The vancs blown off by weather; To lie therein one night, 'tis guessed, Twere better to be ston'd or press'd. Or hang'd ere you come hither. "Two men less room within this cave-
